Title: The title is very interesting and draws the attention of the reader.

Background: it clearly articulated the author mix, however it maybe beneficial to state the perspective of the authors. Is it from an East African perspective or former colonial perspective.

The authors have assumed that the audience have a unified uunderstanding of decolonisation. I suggest you articulate the construct of decolonisation used in this article.

In general it seems the article speaks to health system strengthening using UK as a model to emulate. The east African context mat may need to be accentuate, so we can appreciate what is being decolonised.
