It would be better to use tests that take structural breaks into account in unit root analysis of series of variables. But in this case, it does not cause a major problem. The literature section is insufficient. But most importantly, the study does not have a conclusion. In other words, what were the findings obtained and how did this study contribute to the academic literature? There is no conclusion section in my work that does not contain these results. Therefore, I believe it is not suitable for publication. Kind regards
