

Review of: "Diversity and Inclusion for Innovation-Led Growth"

Gargi Patil

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article is interesting and related with pertinent goal of AMRIT Kaal - as envisaged by the central government. Authors make a strong statements for supporting the vision of inclusion and diversity driven growth, however, it is not backed with adequate data and evidences. Some case study references in this regard would help and would also improve the lit review. Challenges in achieving the Amrit Kaal should also be highlighted. Various policies of the central government such as National Education Policy (2020), and its implications on inclusion and diversity should definably find a mention in the article. Variables measuring inclusion and diversity could have been included (in the methodology section) to make the study more robust. A robust theoretical framework, extensive literature review and policy implications would strengthen the paper's contribution to inclusion and diversity in India and Amrit Kaal.