Overall, the manuscript is written well and can be accepted. The following are some of the comments that need to be addressed before publishing

- Lack of Specificity: The abstract mentions the diverse range of applications of tomatoes in various industries but lacks specific examples or data to support these claims. Adding specific examples or case studies could make the abstract more informative.
- Repetition: The abstract repeats the idea of tomatoes being used in different industries without providing new information or insights. It would be beneficial to focus on a few key industries and elaborate on their specific uses of tomatoes.
- Missing Key Information: The abstract could benefit from including key information such as the current trends or future prospects of tomato use in different industries, which could make it more relevant and engaging.
- Clarity and Structure: The abstract could be structured more clearly to enhance readability and understanding. It could benefit from a more organized layout that highlights the main points and key findings more effectively.
