What's your goal in writing this article? What is new in this paper?

The abstract successfully covers a broad range of pharmacological activities associated with Pterocarpus marsupium Roxb. However, it could benefit from briefly mentioning the methods used in the extraction and fractionation process, as well as any limitations or gaps in current research. Insert a short conclusion at the end of the abstract. The abstract mentions "Vengai" as the commonly acknowledged name for Pterocarpus marsupium Roxb but doesn't provide further information. Adding a brief explanation or context for this term could enhance the abstract's completeness. Ensure that the abstract adheres to any specified length requirements. If there are no length constraints, the abstract appears to be reasonably detailed without being overly lengthy.

It is better to add recent publications, the same as your work, at the end of your Introduction. The purpose of the paper should be clearly stated in the Introduction.

The conclusion that further investigational studies are needed is appropriate. However, it might be beneficial to suggest specific areas for future research or potential applications based on the current findings.

There are some old references, and the authors should present appropriate recent citations.

However, numerous necessary corrections are required for this manuscript - these relate to punctuation errors and editing.
