The article fits into the Journal's scope. The topic of the research is interesting and worthy of attention. All research components are present and clearly stated. The abstract is concise and clear. The introduction is well-written and accurate. The objective of the study is clearly presented. References are adequate and based on relevant literature. The text is adequately written - very, very few editorial and language errors should be corrected - but typographical and linguistic errors can be easily fixed. I have no doubt that the article is worth publishing - it is a work really worth attention, taking into account the scientific and application aspects.
