

Review of: "An Ontological Turn for Psychology in the age of the Machine and Global Warming"

Rosemary Sage

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Review Ratings (1-worst, 10-best):

1. The subject of article is important and worth of investigation 8

- A useful topic to review as technology is changing professional practice

2. The information presented is new (significant contribution to scientific knowledge or psychological practice)

7

- There is much written on this topic presently

3. The literature review is of high quality 5

- There was reference to literature but limited

4. The study is designed appropriately and statistical analyses are valid. The study and statistical analyses are described accurately and appropriately 5

- N/A but the information is presented in bottom up rather than top down style so difficult to follow

5. The interpretation of results is clearly and adequately presented 5

- Not a clear argument to the title as the topic development not clearly sign-posted

6. Overall value of article (including its appropriate fit to the scope and aim of journal) 7

- This is a useful article but needs a coherent structure and more academic presentation

Professor Rosemary JWB Sage. February 2023