This article has some limitations. In the methods, the author describes a survey that was distributed with 21 questions divided across 4 sections. However, the results only provide a summary of answers for two questions. In addition, if you look at the results section, there is a summary of the literature in the results. This would be more fit for the Discussion. I would encourage the author to include a summary of all the primary data (including a summary of demographic information) and then reorganization the results to be only data. Discussion can include the pertinent literature to enrich a description of the data.
