

Review of: "Health Outcome and Economic Growth: The Case of Malaria in Nigeria"

Mahdi Imanian

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

- The manuscript should be checked carefully for any further clerical errors, and English should be improved throughout the text to make it consistent with journal standards.
- More generally, an extended discussion should include the innovation of this work: how is the proposed approach different from industry standards? What is the original contribution of the authors?
- While the work is innovative and has merit, I suggest adding a discussion section to further elaborate on the results and their implications.
- The current references are appropriate. However, some important papers have been omitted. Consequently, some new references about the research subject should be added to the reference list and cited properly in the text such.
- If the authors can satisfactorily address all the concerns above, then the paper could be publishable.