First of all, I would like to thank the authors for sharing their work. It seemed to me to be well-developed and very correct in its technical part.

I think it would be necessary to improve the study of the contextual framework, adding similar studies and making clear what this work brings as a novelty to the scientific field. It may be interesting to incorporate further bibliographic development on the applications of AI solutions in different sectors. I leave the link to an article in which we have discussed these issues in case it could be of interest to the authors.
