

Review of: "The Centrality of Sexual Abstinence in the Buddha's Teachings"

I Ketut Sudarsana

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The abstract must clearly contain a brief background, research objectives, methods, results and conclusions.

This introduction is still weak, therefore develop it again with an analysis of the existing situation and the importance of this research and add relevant references to justify the state of art of this research.

The method is written in one or two paragraphs, is operational in nature (without citation), at least contains the type of research, approaches, data sources, informant determination techniques, research instruments, data collection techniques and data analysis

Expand again by adding research results (according to the data collection technique used). Also add literature (derived from journals) to complement the discussion of research results that have been obtained

The conclusion is enough for one paragraph, but answers the problem under study

The references consists of at least 20 references, 80% of which come from journals and are written using the APA 6 style (for example, see the template).