

Review of: "Customary Land Tenure, Mining, and the Development Question: Insights From a Transitional State"

Gayatree Sahoo¹

¹ Ravenshaw University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper titled "Customary Land Tenure, Mining and the Development Question: Insights From a Transnational State" is a very informative and interesting paper on Zimbabwe's extractive industries and existing land acquisition system. I have some observations on this paper. The authors may work on the following observations and incorporate them in this paper.

1. There is an absence of socio-demographic characteristics of the surveyed respondents. Hence, authors are advised to add them to this paper.
2. A map of the study area may be shown for better understanding of the readers.
3. This work has analyzed the data without any statistical tools. Descriptive statistics can be used for better analysis of the data.
4. Authors are also needed to add some international studies conducted in this regard in India, the USA, the UK, etc. This will improve the arguments of the paper.