Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I'd like to commend the authors on designing and conducting a meaningful study. This is an important area that should interest educators. The authors can consider making the following changes.

Abstract: Please define the population of interest. Could you include the mean age and standard deviation?

Introduction: Please provide more background of the literature supporting the need for this study. Please also change the tense of this section to past tense since this study has already been conducted and is no longer a proposal.

Results: Providing the raw data is helpful, but perhaps should be in an appendix following the article so that the reader can refer to it if needed, but while reading the article, can focus on the findings. I also don't believe there is a need to type out the procedures for determining that the ranges did or did not exceed the critical value.

Discussion: Please add in literature to compare your findings to. For example, does previous literature agree with your findings or did they find different results? Also indicate why you believe those studies differed (study design, different population, etc).

The conclusion is well written and provides key take home points for the reader to consider.
