Thank you for your input to the literature review. This would benefit immensely from other sources of statistical evidence on which paths seasoned professionals chose to take around the world when compared to France. Such statistics are missing from this article. Unfortunately, the data sample used to collect data is far too small to discern a significant result. It is also strongly advised to anonymise the names in such papers. The study's generalisability has some limitations. The writers may appear to be inexperienced with the methodology used, as there is little discussion of its relevance throughout the text.
