

Review of: "Impact of Men's Labour Migration on Non-migrating Spouses' Health: A Systematic Review"

Amba Pande

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper Impact of Men's Labour Migration on Non-migrating Spouses' Health: A Systematic Review is an interesting paper. The methodology of using secondary sources as primary data base is useful and appealing. The paper is publishable but if the below mentioned questions are addressed, the analytical part of the paper can be strengthened.

Was there any specific pattern in Asia and Africa which are different or like each other?

Authors write about frequent contact between the migrants and the wives left behind. This can be explained in time duration... How frequent?

Was there any difference in income groups?