This manuscript shows very artistic pictures, allowing to view patients' perspectives from a different angle, in the current era of digital health. One major comment is : if submitted to a peer-reviewed journal, the methodology should be expanded including sample size, statistics details etc. The current manuscript as it is could easily be shared to a broad audience (i.e. people living with the disease or condition) on the web (blogs, other websites) while if it submitted as peer-review, the audience would be more limited to scientists before eventually be accessible to a broader audience.
