

Review of: "Raising Adaptive Capacity to Climate Change in Energy and Food Sectors of Egypt"

Barbara Hanna Pereira<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The text is well-written, but requires some revisions:

- I believe that the introduction, methodology, and conclusion could be better elaborated upon. They are currently quite summarized.
- A location map of the study area in Egypt could be included, providing commentary on demographic density, main agricultural productions, etc.
- Since the article discusses climate, it would be beneficial for readers to understand the current climate conditions. This could be achieved by presenting the region's climatology with maps or graphs, explaining the driest and wettest seasons of the year, and discussing temperature variations.
- Additionally, citing other works that have utilized the IMPACT model could enhance the article's context.