Thank you for inviting the reviewer.

This manuscript is about a highly relevant topic in soil science. However, the abstract is too brief. The introduction is too short. The author should add novelty and hypotheses to the research, in addition to background surprises, in the introduction, emphasizing the purpose of the research. The core idea in the article is not prominent and not attractive enough. The obvious lack of connecting words between sentences leads to confusion. Spelling and English need to be thoroughly checked.

Overall,

This review lacks the latest methods and references. The references are quite outdated, and the discussion is also quite brief, avoiding precise data. Many sentences require professional improvement. It is also recommended to organize the text. The conclusion can be more constructive and detailed. I believe that this comment must have substantial improvements before it can be published.
