Thank you for your work on long COVID in Mexico. The study is interesting, and I think a brief statement on content analysis can enhance the overall quality. It is correct that the findings of Mexican studies that describe the traits of people with extended COVID in Mexico are summed up in this concise communication. I would outline the search method that was used to locate the articles, as well as the inclusion and exclusion standards for the included articles, in order to provide greater transparency to the data that is currently available. Furthermore, please include the study design and the year of publication in the table. I hope to read a revised version soon. Thank you.
