

Review of: "Learning Corpus Christianum as a Theological Education Curriculum towards a Global Community"

Rizzamila Superio

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

To begin, I would want to thank the author, GP Harianto, for doing this research study. To guarantee a thorough examination of the paper, I will do a part-by-part assessment:

1. Abstract: The content of the abstract should clearly contain the research problem and its objectives, method, and summary of the results and conclusions in more or less 250 words. If I may suggest, write the abstract in a structured manner that it is easily understood by the readers stating clearly the research question, results, and conclusions and recommendation.
2. Introduction: The story line was clearly constructed to begin with the emergence of globalization, as defined by Webster 2010. In order to strengthen the claim, you may choose to incorporate the study made by Paul James and Manfred B. Steger on "A Genealogy of Globalization: The career of a Concept", here they emphasized how the birth of globalization as a new buzzword become prevalent and prominent. Then, you may continue with Theological Education as an important concept in the development of the curriculum. You may also wish to add your content on curriculum development by referring to a book entitled, "A curriculum design Manual for Theological Education: A Learning Outcomes Focus by LeRoy Ford. Here the author is clear about what the meaning of curriculum, how to design a curriculum in the real world, etc. Finally, include topics on "Corpus Christianum" as an important element in the curriculum towards a global society, particularly the concept by St. Augustine.
3. Discussion: You may wish to give emphasis on the result of the study focusing on the research questions.
4. Conclusion: Giving a concise answer to each research question will be the main objective of this section. For example, on statement of the problem on "Corpus Christianum" as a learning theological education curriculum, it was found out that it emphasizes learning humanity, that the curriculum believes in academic, humanist, social and technological reconstruction, lecturer specialization towards globalization, and globalization students can become corpus Christianum needs. What crucial conclusion can we derived in relation to curriculum that will influence the global society?
5. General Observation: This study is so timely that the school today has to improve the general whole being of every child. Since values will determine the type of child we want to raise as educators, we think they should be at the center of the curriculum. Embracing these principles will undoubtedly influence one's conduct, personality and decision making. Thank you and God bless! Hope to have this published soon.

