A very important and relevant topic - a huge task to do, I suggest "only" a more contextualized form. There are many papers and volumes, which has been diagnosed the decline and radical changes of this scientific field, in my recommendation, their conclusions are worth to utilize. These are the most important ones:

- Paedagogica Historica, Vol 48, Issue 6 (2012) Longing for the present in the history of education
- Thomas S. Popkewitz (2013, Ed.). Rethinking the History of Education. Transnational Perspectives on its Questions, Methods and Knowledge
- History of Education Quarterly, Vol 53, Issue 2 (2013) Special Theme Issue: If Life Were Endless, What Would You Study?
- Rita Hofstetter, Emmanuelle Picard, Alexandre Fontaine and Solenn Huitric, "Mapping the Discipline History of Education," Paedagogica Historica 50, no. 6 (2014): 871–80.
- Espacio, Tiempo y Educación, Vol 3, No 1 (2016) The History of Education looking at itself
- Susanne Spieker and Angelo Van Gorp, "Capacity Building and Communitas in the History Education," Paedagogica Historica 52, no. 6 (2016): 768–83.
- José Luis Hernandez Huerta, Andrés Payás Rico and Carmen Sanchidrián Blanco, "Global territory and the international map of history of education journals: Profiles and behavior," International Journal for the Historiography of Education 9, no. 2 (2019): 206–26.
- Tony Honorato and Ana Clara Bortoleto Nery, "History of Education and Covid-19," Acta Scientiarum Education 42 (2020): 1–21.
- Paedagogica Historica 58, no 5 (2022). Histories of the Past and Histories of the Future: Pandemics and Historians of Education
- History of Education 52, no 2-3 (2023). Histories of education in the past, present and future: trends and intersections

It seems it is an emerging field and mostly dominated by the European perspective - the next issue is to add your special perspective to it, change the discourses. Before that, you have to know the state of art - I will happily help Grace to get these articles, if needed.
