

Review of: "[Review Article] Melatonin, ATP, and Cataracts: The Two Faces of Crystallin Phase Separation"

Tamer M. Khedr

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

After reviewing the article in detail, I suggest a minor revision of this paper. Below are my detailed comments.

- What is the significance of this work? Maybe the author should pay more attention to stressing the novelty of this work.
- The abstract needs to be revised: background and problem statement should be briefly added to highlight the novelty of this work.
- The introduction section is excessively lengthy and should be streamlined, focusing on the novelty of this work.
- There are some typo mistakes and extra or shortened spaces in the text. I recommend authors to double-check their typo mistakes throughout the text.
- The language should be improved.
- The conclusion and summary should be clear.
- References should be updated.