

Review of: "Acacia Pycnantha Gum Exudates Recognised As a Traditional Food in Two Countries May Have Economic Potential"

Supachok Tanpichai<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> King Mongkut's University of Technology Thonburi

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The work shows the promising application of Acacia pycnantha gum as a food additive in Australia and New Zealand. More exploration of its properties and its economic issues would significantly strengthen the work. Additionally, a more in-depth discussion of its potential in Australia and New Zealand would provide valuable insights.