Dear Authors

Manuscripts related to Aerococcus urinae Endocarditis: An Emerging Infectious Disease are very important to inform medical personnel around the world because the number of cases has increased.

This case report is well written, but the clinical representation needs to be improved. Not only should the data be as detailed as possible, especially in the corresponding figures, but detailed information should also be included in the abstract. The current abstract is not convincing enough and should be rewritten.

In the introduction, you need to clearly state the purpose of this case report, the benefits, and the practical implications of why it is important to discuss it. Since you also used data from previous publications, the title should be changed to "A Case Report and Literature Review.". In the results, you need to add figures that support the description of the case.

You also need to add how this can be detected early. What is the role of policymakers in minimizing this case, and what is your proposed case management for this condition? This should be discussed in the discussion.

Thanks
