

Review of: "The Cost of Being a Celebrity on Mental Health"

Tsun-Feng Chiang¹

¹ National Chiayi University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article focuses on celebrities' mental health caused by pressure, particularly from social media. I suggest the author ensure a smoother flow by organizing the content into distinct sections. While there are some examples provided in the main text, giving some numbers through tables, such as the average life spans of celebrities and the rough numbers of celebrities committing suicide or being caught for substance abuse during a specific period in a particular region, can provide readers with an impression. The whole article emphasizes the celebrities' struggles. Is there any potential solution or example for celebrities to cope with fame-related struggles?