

Review of: "Assessment of soil erosion in the Cesar watershed, an initial step toward the restoration of the Cesar River"

Naser Ebadati¹

¹ Islamic Azad University Islamshahr Branch

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The authors have tried to model the amount of river sediment erosion and the following points are presented to strengthen the article: In addition to the research method, the annual erosion rate should be included in the abstract in addition to the research method, and it is not necessary to include the contents mentioned at the end of the abstract. 2- In the presented model, it is necessary to mention the lithology characteristics of the sediment and the river bed along the route, and is there a change in the type of the river bed? 3- It is recommended to compare the method used with other conventional methods similar to the climate of the study area to determine the innovation of the article. 4- In the conclusion section, it is necessary to accurately present the positive points of the research method and the exact results obtained and the amount of annual erosion in different sectors.