

Review of: "Grandparenting Children With Special Needs and Disabilities: A Narrative Review"

Ma Tonirose Mactal

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper offers a wealth of information. It highlighted the important contribution of grandparents in child-rearing, especially of grandchildren with special needs/disabilities. By knowing the specific roles they play and what the differences are between the level of support offered by grandmothers vis-à-vis grandfathers toward their adult children and grandchildren, relatives and/or community members may be in a better position to understand how they can help the GMs and GFs in return to make caregiving less stressful or detrimental to their well-being.