My main comments are:

1. There is a need for an update of the data and sources for section 3 (last reference is for 2016), section 4 (last reference 2020), section 5 (last reference is for 2016), and section 6 (last reference is 2013).
2. In the section of analysis, the current methods are too simple. The sample is large enough to attempt other methodologies like Random Matching Estimators.
3. Same section of analysis the tables presented only show coefficients that are not so simple to interpret, they should present marginal effects estimations for Tables 7, 8, and 9.
4. Same section of analysis, they select certain methods (ANOVA, binomial logistic) without any explanation, and when other methodologies are available like binomial probit or RME.
5. Because the study only shows relations, in the discussion section, the authors should include some comments about the potential drawbacks that the estimated relations may have, and the potential need for future estimation of causal relationships.
