The literature analysis in the article is based on technical documents, not scientific sources. A narrow list of references. It is not clear why old literary sources are used? I recommend expanding the analysis of literature, and basing the insights on scientific research and connecting with the research of other scientists. An article abstract does not have all the elements typical of an abstract. The introduction does not define the meaning of the research object, the novelty of the research is not justified, the research methodology is not defined and explained. A lot of attention is paid to calculations, but too little attention is paid to the analysis itself, and the synthesis method is not applied in practice. The summary of findings, conclusions and recommendations need to be improved, to switch to a scientific style, to reveal the results of the study. The scientific value of the article is very doubtful, for now it is a practical task and not a scientific work.
