

Open Peer Review on Qeios

Monocytopenia with susceptibility to infections

INSERM

Source

INSERM. (1999). Orphanet: an online rare disease and orphan drug data base.

Monocytopenia with susceptibility to infections. ORPHA:228423

Monocytopenia with susceptibility to infections is a rare, genetic, primary immunodeficiency disorder characterized by profound circulating monocytopenia, B- and NK-cell lymphopenia and severe dendritic cell decrease, which manifests clinically with disseminated mycobacterial and viral infections, as well as opportunistic fungal and parasitic infections and frequent pulmonary alveolar proteinosis. Predisposition to developing myeloid neoplasms is associated.