

Review of: "Obesity, Dyslipidemia and other Risks Factors for Metabolic Syndrome among Indigenous Black African Secondary School Students in Lagos, Nigeria"

Adnan Barutcu¹

¹ Cukurova University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I congratulate the researchers for their great work and wish them continued success.

In terms of improving the study:

There are various definitions of metabolic syndrome in the introduction. These definitions should be mentioned. The importance of metabolic syndrome, which is becoming a growing problem for adolescents, should be emphasized more strikingly.

Criteria for inclusion in the study should be written more clearly.

The tables are very detailed and crowded. If more summary tables were made, the tables could be read and understood more clearly. If researchers want to describe results this way, there is no need to change it. However, it should be known that tables tire the reader.

It should be further supported with literature in the discussion section. In this respect, it is recommended to benefit from the article mentioned below.

"BARUTCU, Adnan; ORNEK, Ceren; KOZANOGLU, Erkan. A growing problem in childhood and adolescence: Metabolic syndrome and its relationship with physical activity and fitness. Marmara Medical Journal, 2023, 36.2: 255-261."

Finally, there are some limitations of the study. It is recommended that authors include these as a paragraph.

King Regards.