The review on traditional pharmacological properties of Pterocarpus marsupium though overall looks good but still it requires resounding transformations.

1. The pharmacological evidences mentioned in the review looks completely monotonous and lacks scientific intellectuality from the authors. It will be better that the authors need to put efforts for improving the quality of description in the MS.
2. The authors should also focus on scientific discussions on the mechanism of actions related to several pharmacological evidences mentioned, which is lacking.
3. The authors have also reported the phytochemical reported from the plant in Table 1. The authors could also add few dimensions to this Table by adding the pharmacological values of the individual phytoconstituents.
4. Overall typographical and grammatical errors need to taken care of carefully.
5. In the reference section, the references cited need to be cross checked and to be checked for their citations in the text or not. In addition, the format of the references cited need to be uniform which is lacking.

After critically evaluating the review manuscript, I would strongly suggest for complete transformations of the manuscript for enhancing the quality of the MS. Hence, I would like to reject the article in this present form and the authors need to look for improving the quality of the MS for greater scientific audience.
