The section headed Theory of Planned Behaviour should form part of the introduction and need not be so long. At the moment it is placed almost randomly in the text.

This cannot be a post-test design as no test/intervention was applied- it should be cross-sectional experimental design.

In the conclusion the researcher states: "The results of this study show that waste segregation is a practicable and sustainable approach for more effective solid waste management in communities, especially in the university environment, fostering a cleaner environment" - this was not covered in the results or discussion section.
