

Review of: "Who Is Responsible for Preventing Children's Sexual Harassment?"

Sermin Turtulla¹

¹ University of Prizren "Ukshin Hoti"

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Comments

1. The methods section should be in line with the objective of the study and the information provided in the abstract,
2. If the participants were part of the study, information about them should be included in the method's section (e.g. number of participants who participated in focus groups, number of observations, time of observation),
3. The data analysis method used in the study (Miles and Huberman) should include additional information related to this method with respective references,
4. The discussion section should interpret and explain the findings of the study rather than add additional information which was not mentioned earlier in the research paper.