The article presents an interesting topic that relates the human being with the environment based on rock art in the Brazilian region of Piauí.

In general, the research paper is well written. The rock art sites and their contextualization are well described. The bibliographic references are also quite complete. The introduction is perhaps a bit long compared to the following sections. Regarding iconographic description related to the subject in question, it could be more detailed.

However, some aspects should be revised:

- The English language should be revised throughout the text. For example, in the title it would be more appropriate to use "rock art" instead of "rocky records". It would be appropriate to have the language revision done by a native English speaker or a professional translator.
- The quality of some of the images should be improved such as figures 2, 6A, 8 or 9.

In my opinion, the article would be suitable for publication once the necessary revisions have been made.
