It is a very interesting topic; however, the paper needs some improvements.

The used methodology must be presented. Authors should explain how and where they found papers. I believe there is much more available literature than that presented in this paper. All found papers should be presented in a shortened table or in an article's annex. The reason why the presented papers were chosen is also needed. Tranfield et al.

(<https://doi.org/10.1111/1467-8551.00375>) and Doyle et. al. (<https://doi.org/10.3390/en14206521>) could be references for this section.

Authors call figures 1 up to 4, but they are not in the paper.

A professional English review will make your paper easier to read and better presented.
