

Review of: "The Impact of Tax Revenue on Macroeconomic Variables: A Case Study from Palestine"

Fariha Sami¹

¹ Shaheed Benazir Bhutto Women University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Providing more context on why Palestine was chosen and the significance of the study in a broader economic or political context could enhance the study. Mentioning the role of Israeli control over tax revenue collection is good but could be expanded slightly.

Clearly state the research questions or hypotheses being tested.

Include any robustness checks or sensitivity analyses to validate the results.

Discuss in detail the implications for policymakers, particularly in the context of Palestinian economic policy and the external control over tax revenue collection.

Suggest areas for future research, such as exploring other macroeconomic variables, using different methodologies, or examining the impact of external factors on tax revenue effectiveness.

Some of the references are in capital letters, rewrite them again.