The article is well-written and touches on many of the issues relevant to the life of electric vehicles, especially concerning the battery. However, as already noted by other reviewers, it is hardly a research article, as it does not present any new data or evidence, and it delves too little into the topics covered to be considered an academic review article. If, on the other hand, the authors intend to publish a popular article, I deem the outcome acceptable. Authors should double-check their references and ensure they are not cited out of context.
