Although the subject is interesting and novel, I believe that the authors should narrow the subject more because it is too broad, especially when it comes to the fact that there is a wide presence of types of Think Tanks and not all of them have the same purposes, for example, I I have participated in some publications on the subject (look in Information Development Journal for our proposal on Think Tanks in Latin America and it only refers to those that fall within the category of academics). Also, I believe that this article should be built according to the elements of a scientific article: Abstract, introduction, theoretical framework, methodology, data analysis, conclusions/discussion and references.
