

Open Peer Review on Qeios

Angiocentric glioma

INSERM

Source

INSERM. (1999). Orphanet: an online rare disease and orphan drug data base.

Angiocentric glioma. ORPHA:251671

Angiocentric glioma (AG) is an extremely rare slow-growing glial neoplasm of the central nervous system, usually arising in a superficial location in the cerebrum, affecting all ages and both sexes, and characterized by intractable seizures and headaches, with most cases being cured by surgical incision alone and therefore having a good prognosis.