

Review of: "Essential Calculus, a Revolutionary Approach to Teaching Calculus"

Petr Veigend<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Brno University of Technology

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article presents the different structure to teach calculus. I like the idea and the proposed structure, however, the paper itself is not very clear. The provided examples are interesting, but I'm not sure why they were included in the paper.

The equations are very hard to read, and the references are missing.

I would recommend better explaining the structure and aims of the article before proceeding with publication.