

Review of: "Enhancing Academic Spoken English Skills Through an Immersive Virtual World: A Pilot Study Focusing on Motivation, Confidence, and Teacher Presence"

Graciela Arráez-Vera<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universidad de Alicante

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I believe this is a good paper because the article is very interesting and well structured. It is a great contribution to the scientific literature, as, for educational practice, it provides with new knowledge for teachers on how to improve language learning using innovative techniques. Overall, I think there is a significant improvement of the first draft:

- Although the literature review is still extensive, the ideas are now well connected to each other and it offers a considerable improvement of the first paper.
- It is an excellent idea to remove the research hypotheses.
- The instruments used for data collection are interesting but they are too extensive to compile in a single paper.
- Although the presentation of the results is correct, it is nevertheless too extensive due to the number of variables.