

Review of: "“Saving the Forest” with a REDD+ Project: Socio-Ecological Repercussions on Indigenous People in Cambodia"

Jim Perry<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of Minnesota

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This paper poses interesting, very important questions and is very well written. However, it is imbalanced, which deprives the authors of making the impact they desire. The paper suggests that deforestation is progressing in Cambodia (and other places) in spite of the published goals and objectives of REDD+. But it provides no evidence to support those claims.