The study tries to achieve two objectives, (i) to understand the current housing challenges in Uganda, and (ii) to analyze the socio-economic impact of inadequate housing. Along with that, the study also explains the benefits of affordable housing, sustainable solutions for affordable housing, and success stories of affordable housing finance in Uganda only. However, there are also some issues with the paper. The study lacks a review of literature carried out on similar issues in different parts of the world. The paper is based on qualitative research methods, which needs further explanation. The study identifies three issues with reference to housing land prices, access to finance, and inadequate infrastructure, which require some examples to be supported. The second objective of the study is untouched and needs elaboration. Policy interventions are general.
