

Review of: "The Role of Nation and State Institutions in Nigeria's Economy: An Empirical Review"

Chenkai Niu

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The overall idea, concept definition and basic framework of this article is clear, but personally, I believe that this article needs some data to support the analysis, and the quantitative content is currently insufficient; there is currently a lot of qualitative content apparently, but it needs to be further enhanced to be persuasive; in addition, this article does not seem to demonstrate significant innovation, which results in the article seeming to look like a kind of empirical summarization, and thus the policy implications and assessment also appear to be very general, which This has led to a loosening of the established framework; it has also led to a relatively clear description of the abstract, but it does not quite match the actual presentation of results in the article. It is recommended that the paper be enriched with quantitative data and that the innovations, contributions and value of the paper be clearly emphasized.