

Review of: "Character Development of The Nation's Next Generation In Terms of Reading Habits In The Midst of Sophistication of Technology 5.0"

Yiren Kong¹

¹ State University of New York at Stony Brook

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

First of all, this is not a research paper so my critique only treats it as a casual writing.

I believe your point might be an interesting point, but as a reader I have been wondering throughout my reading what the sophisticated technology 5.0 is. As a writer you need to assume your readers do not possess the same type of knowledge as you do and provide explanations whenever you think is needed. It is particularly important for a construct such as the sophisticated technology 5.0 because it is the very foundation of your article. Without knowing what sophisticated technology 5.0 is exactly, it is almost impossible for your readers to make any sense out of your writing.

Also, I do feel the introduction is a little monotone, if you may. There are many constructs that are central to your piece, but you spend quite a lot of time focusing on one or two of them, which I do not prefer. Instead, I would suggest, for example, shorten the part where you try to define reading and add more content on sophisticated technology 5.0 and also better define character development. They will help you build a solid foundation, even if not in the sense of research, for your readers to really enjoy and echo with your writing.