The manuscript seems more addressed to a newspaper than to a scientific journal; the length is not appropriate for a review article. You are writing about tomatoes in a generic way; you should go deeper in the research of articles to cite and delve more deeply into the topics you talk about, i.e., in the line 2 of "Agricultural Research," when you speak about the study of genetics, physiology, and biochemistry of tomatoes, you should talk more about these studies focusing on the different genetic engineering processes.
