

Review of: "Tourists' Activities and their Impacts on Chinhoyi Caves Heritage Site, Zimbabwe"

Ana Belen Mudarra Fernandez¹

¹ Universidad de Jaén

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Dear authors,

first of all, I would like to congratulate you on the production of this very interesting and useful article for your area. However, and from my experience where I have worked on impact in World Heritage Cities, I dare to propose some changes that could be made to help the reader in reading and understanding it.

The first change that should be made is to introduce the key words of the work, as well as to improve the summary so that it contains the most relevant data of the work and arouses the reader's interest in the work.

After this, I dare to recommend that you clarify some terms that are surely very familiar to you, but which may be confusing for the rest of the readers.

On the other hand, I see that you have used Atlas for your work but nevertheless the images of the finds you find are scarce. I would recommend you to use more images because the graphic visual helps the reader to understand the topic you are dealing with.

As for the literature review, I consider that it could be improved as there is a lack of authors who have dealt with the subject.

As far as the methodology is concerned, there are several aspects that could be improved:

Why do they use surveys and more specifically, why 15?

What methodology has been developed and how has it been carried out?

As for the results, these should be explained more precisely.

In conclusions and recommendations from my perspective it is interesting to make general comments and strategies and after that to make specific strategies to help your territory.

Although the work is a good work, it could be improved.

