I congratulate the research team for this article!

The topic of the article is in line with the development of CSR in society and the results obtained are interesting.

A few comments for this article:

1. A better explanation of the research methodology used is needed. For example, there is not enough local bibliographic data to support a percentage of only 22.9% of women who responded at the questionnaire, or the period of collection of information by questionnaire is not defined.
2. The good bibliographical references used can be added with new articles from the last period of time, which could lead to the use of a single theoretical direction.
3. Conducting a qualitative research before the quantitative research could have more correctly defined hypotheses of this research.

I hope that the comments lead to an improvement of the article! All the best!
