Abstract:

The abstract should succinctly present the key findings of your research. Ensure clarity and brevity in conveying the significant results.

Introduction:

Consider merging sections 1 and 2 to provide a comprehensive overview of relevant studies related to your research problem. Clearly state the research questions and specify the contributions of your study.

Materials and Methods:

Address spelling errors and thoroughly review the text for coherence. For example, there is an inconsistency in the years mentioned ("between 2013 and 2013").

Also, elaborate on the primary and secondary data sources, specifying where and how the data were collected.

Be concise and precise in presenting the research methodology. Clarify the frameworks and approaches used.

Conclusion:

The conclusion needs refinement to clearly articulate the outcomes of your research. Specify the contributions and implications of your findings.

Discussion:

Add a robust discussion section, incorporating insights from related studies. This section is crucial for placing your research in context and highlighting its significance.

I encourage you to carefully address these points to enhance the clarity and impact of your manuscript.
